November 2005

A MESSAGE FROM PASTOR KEN

Well, November is upon us again. The leaves off of our pin oak in the back cover the patio about as quickly as we can blow them away. Three pumpkins stand guard outside of our house- a large one for dad, a slightly smaller one for Melis, and a teeny little one Will calls "my punkin." Fall is definitely here, and Thanksgiving is coming up fast.

Thanksgiving is obviously a holiday rich in significance for us as Americans, but what is less well known is what a significant day this is for Presbyterians.

Imagine this. The year is 1620 and the Pilgrims have arrived in Plymouth, Massachusetts. After surviving the winter, they plant crops in the spring. Among the crops they plant is maize, or corn, given to them by the Wapanoag Indian tribe. In October of 1621, with the harvest well and truly gathered, the pilgrims follow a long standing English custom and celebrate their cornucopia with a day set aside for feasting. In an act of multiculturalism that even my brother-in-law at UC Berkeley would be proud of, the Pilgrims celebrated the day with the Wapanoag, including their leader, King Massasoit. Edward Winslow writes one of only two original records of that day: "Many Indians came amongst us, and amongst the rest their greatest king Massasoit, with some ninety men, whom for three days we entertained and feasted, and they went out and killed five Deer, which they brought to the Plantation and bestowed on our Governor, and upon the Captain and others. And although it be not always so plentiful, as it was at this time with us, yet by the goodness of God, we are so far from want, that we often with you partakers of our plenty."

But how did all this come to be in the first place? Who were the Pilgrims and what were they doing freezing their tails off in New England? Well, about a hundred years before the Pilgrims found themselves sailing across the Atlantic, England found itself finally caught up in the European revolution known as the Reformation. Specifically, King Henry VIII (1509-1547), desiring a male heir to secure his kingdom, wanted to divorce Catherine of Aragon, it being not likely she would have any more children, and marry Anne Bolyn, a fetching young lady in his court. Unfortunately for Henry, Rome did not grant his annulment. Kings being kings, however, Henry suddenly finds the Protestants extremely attractive and eventually drafts what is known as The Ten Articles in 1536, establishing a very conservative Protestant church in England differing with the Roman Catholic Church only in not acknowledging the sovereignty of the Pope in Rome.

While this compromise secured Henry's desires- it certainly caused quite a bit of trouble, angering both conservatives who didn't want to break with Rome, and liberals who desired a far more sweeping reform. This political and theological turmoil churned throughout the reigns of Edward VI (1547-1553), became especially sharp during the short reign of Mary of Tudor (1553-1558) who re-established Roman Catholicism, and becomes mature under the long rule of Elizabeth I (1558-1603). During Elizabeth's reign, radical Protestants influenced by John Calvin in Geneva grew more and more strong in England, advocating adherence to scripture alone, the removal of art and adornment within the sanctuary, the acknowledgment of only two sacraments and Sabbath as the only holiday (rejecting Christmas and Easter as "unbiblical), and the proscription against special clerical dress for ministers. Thus, attempting to purify worship and the life of the church, these more radical reformers became dubbed "The Puritans". Though Presbyterians in Scotland differed with Puritans over how to organize the church, these two groups shared wide agreement on much else- hence in England, these English Puritans are basically like the Presbyterians of the South. Though extremely frustrated with these pesky Calvinists, Elizabeth tolerated them. It wasn't until Elizabeth's death in 1603 and the arrival of James I (1603-1625) that these Puritans suffered brutal oppression and fled for their lives, first to the Netherlands, and finally to New England in 1620.

Obviously, much has changed since those first Reformed Calvinists broke bread with the Indians. We celebrate Christmas and Easter now. I get to wear what I like to call my "black dress" on Sunday, and we certainly welcome liturgical art into our sanctuary and like to think that God is well pleased with these faithful efforts. Still, it is well worth remembering our Calvinist connection with those Puritans of old- well worth remembering the sacrifices they made to establish a new nation founded upon democratic equality, religious tolerance, and the separation of church and state. The Puritans knew they could be people of faith, good citizens, and at the same time enjoy the freedom to think for themselves and to criticize both church and state when necessary. In an age in which the lines between church and state are increasingly blurred, I find myself extra thankful this year for these Pilgrims and for the courage of their convictions. As I snarf down my turkey and pumpkin pie, I shall do so in their honor. How about you?

Singing?? Let's Talk About It!

At a recent Wednesday night choir rehearsal, I shared with the choir some thoughts about what it is the choir is about every Sunday morning. I had recently read John Bells' book entitled, "The Singing Thing" and was moved by some of his words. He states that it is commonly believed that God gave Moses Ten Commandments. The possibility is that God gave eleven, but that Moses didn't have enough room on the stone tablets to engrave the final one, so God had to wait until David came along and let the forgotten decree be heard: "Sing A New Song!" That this is a divine command and not a human option can be gleaned from the fact that the words "Sing A New Song" do not appear just once in the Bible, but are explicitly stated in Psalms 33, 40, 96,98,144 and 149!

OK...sing a new song.... what does that have to do with you? Well...I'm glad you asked! I am now in my seventh year as the music director at TPC and I can't tell you how many people have told me that "they can't sing!" I usually smile and listen to their stories, but in my heart I really want to challenge them with that statement. Chances are that someone along the way told them they couldn't sing. Usually that person will inevitably have been a person who was in a position of authority over them or who was in close friendship or kinship with them. The fact must be stated straight away that there is actually a very small percentage of people who cannot replicate a melody in the right key. Did you know that less than 1% of the population really has amusia? (tone-deafness) For the others, the memory of being told they could not sing has had such a cataclysmic effect on them that it prevents them from believing that their voices could ever get it right. Memories do have that kind of effect on us.

Well.... the good news is that you CAN put an end to that way of thinking and learn how to Sing A New Song!! That's what we offer by being a member of choir. The door is always open to anyone who would love to Sing a New Song to the Lord and be a part of this family within the larger family of TPC. No prior choir experience is necessary and reading music is optional.

I am thinking about hosting a two hour Saturday morning seminar that will address this issue and would like to know the level of interest. Much information will be shared and vocal tips and techniques will be taught. You CAN come back to the voice inside of you!!

Call or email Kris if you would like to be a part of the seminar. Thanks!

GREETING AND MEETING

The friendliness of the congregation is one of the nicest things about TPC. It is obvious as you greet each other every Sunday morning to see how you all enjoy one another's company. Pastor Ken even had to call members and guests in to worship because they were having so much fun greeting each other. Everyone forgot to leave the narthex and gather in the sanctuary.

There are several "formal" ways we greet at TPC.

One is to have members stand by the glass doors and distribute bulletins with a cheerful smile. Sometimes you even have your children help you and this is such good practice for our youngsters. We will now call this position SERVER.

Another important way we meet each other is by gathering after worship for refreshments and an embrace or handshake to go along with our morning coffee. We have volunteers who sign up to provide sweets and we hope you will put your name on the list and bring your favorite goody either homemade or store bought.

The Deacons are each assigned one month of the year to provide the SERVERS who also put on the coffee. This gives each Parish group the opportunity to serve in this capacity. When your Deacon calls you and asks, please say yes. You might even call your deacon and volunteer which would make it so much easier. Acting as an official "SERVER" is much simpler than you might think. See the simple instructions below.

We have a third and brand new way to be friendly to each other and that is Ronn Rhodes new group of "GREETERS" who actually stand at the outside door and give you a handshake as you enter the Narthex. The name of this group is Xenia. Standing right behind the GREETERS are the HOSTS who are always on the lookout for visitors so they can show them the ropes and make sure folks feel included. Give Ronn a call and volunteer to take your turn at the outside door "GREETING" or "HOSTING".

The SERVERS and the GREETERS will now be gathering the collection.

Let's continue to make this old place the friendliest on the block.

What to do if you're a TPC SERVER:

Prior to Church Service:

- Preheat dishwasher by turning master switch "ON" and heater "ON". It must heat up at least 30 minutes prior to use. (Follow instructions on dishwasher)
- Set out:
 - Sugar, creamer, tea, napkins and spoons for stirring.
 - Coffee mugs are stored in the carts below the counter.
 - Medium size cold cups for the juice. The juice will either be in the refrigerator or in a cupboard across from the refrigerator.
- Start the coffee and hot water:
 - The smaller silver coffee maker is used for hot water.
 - The large coffee maker is used for coffee. The coffee is kept in the freezer in a Tupperware container with the scoop.

Coffee:

90 Cups---4 1/2 scoops

60 Cups---3 scoops

30 Cups---1 1/2 scoops

- Pass out bulletins:

- Pass out bulletins at the double glass doors. There are special bulletins for both younger and older children.

- Gather the Collection:

- Together with the Greeters, the Servers will gather the collection.

- During the last song of the service:

- Fill the coffee cups.
- Fill the juice glasses.
- Set out snacks, if available

- Clean up the kitchen:

- Wash the mugs, following the instructions posted on the dishwasher.
- Put the mugs away and clean up the kitchen.

- Turn off dishwasher

Nothing to it! It's a lot easier than it looks and a great way to "serve" your church now and again.

Youth Group romps at Corn Maize

Saturday night, October 22, seventeen patient adventurers waited over an hour in a long, long line for entry into the Corn Maize on Sauvy Island. Divided into three groups, each finally headed into the forest of tall corn stalks. Conditions were great. No rain. Not too cold. And the mud was moderate when compared to last year's slop.

I entered the maize with fun-lovers, better yet, fun-lovers with a sense of direction. The first group conquered the maize in 45 minutes. My group took an hour and ten minutes. Not bad when you consider what else they were doing. They had things to do well beyond finding the way out. It took time to compliment and thank the wonderful, spooky-costumed characters that jumped out at us from amid the corn. It took time to befriend and guide a lost man and woman who had been caught in a continuous loop. It took time to act as "guides" by standing still and pointing fellow maize walkers in random directions. Some people figured out these guys were bogus; others didn't. What fun.

I had a great time. Thanks.

The church treasurer and administration committee would like to thank you for your gifts to TPC. Your gifts of time as well as financial contributions ensure that we can continue to do God's work through our church. Please note that we currently have a shortage of $1,453 in our per capita account. All churches in the Presbyterian Church USA are asked to contribute $21.00 per member to support the work of the church outside of our local congregations. Thank you to the many families at TPC who have helped reduce our per capita assessment by their contribution of $21 per TPC member in their family. For those who have not contributed but are able, your payment can be included in the weekly offering or by sending it to the church. Please indicate the portion of the check that is being contributed as a per capita payment.
